17. ABSTRACT (MAX. 250 WORDS)

Day by day reports by different visitors to the Flint Community schools during 1962 are presented along with press clippings, interviews, and pictures relevant to each visit.

Two March visitors, an official of The United Arab Republic and an associate professor of the University of Michigan, both spoke to a group of Flint citizens enrolled in the Mott Program course, "The Middle East: Problems and Progress."

Reviewed also is the 10th annual children's theatre workshop sponsored by the speech and drama department of the Mott Program. Miss Rita Christe, assistant professor of speech at Northwestern University, conducted sessions in creative dramatics, formal scripted plays, and puppet theatre.

Theater Teacher Workshop Is Set

Professor From Northwestern To Conduct Event Saturday

The 10th annual children's theater workshop sponsored by the speech and drama department of the Mott Program will be held Saturday at Hamady House, 6315 Branch Rd.

Teachers new to and experienced in children's theater have been invited to the daylong workshop. The Mott Program runs 37 children's theater classes in its after-school and Saturday-morning enrichment project.

Rita Criste, assistant professor of the Northwestern University School of Speech, will conduct sessions in creative dramatics, formal scripted plays and puppet theater.

Miss Rita Criste

FROM AFAR — The director of the National Office of School Health in Cambodia arrived in Flint Wednesday for a two-day inspection of the health program in the Flint Public Schools.

She is Dr. Kol Syphoung, who is touring this country under auspices of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Tuesday, she observed activities at Durant-Tuuri-Mott School, the Mott Children's Health Center and Dental Clinic and the Flint Health Department. Today she was at Parkland School to see its breakfast program and met with PTA health chairmen at Homedale School.

When Dr. Syphoung returns to Cambodia next month, she expects to use information gathered in this country to help in expanding her country's school-health program.

Professor Honored

Dr. Ethel Alpenfels, professor of educational sociology and anthropology at New York University was honored at a dinner Thursday in the home of Miss Ola B. Hiller on Windemere Avenue, attended by representatives of Flint chapters of Delta Kappa Gamma Society.

The honoree, who was selected by the society as its 1960 international honorary member, is in Flint to participate in the third session of the Cooperative Inter-University Workshop Thursday through Saturday.

"I just finished talking with Dr. Ethel J. Alpenfels, Professor of Anthropology at New York University, about the Mott Program.

I have become a convert like many of those who have heard of this program and would like details about the program, especially around juvenile delinquency. I understand the Mott Program first started twenty years ago around juvenile delinquency and then progressed to the clinical aspects and finally in classes for adults and children as well as involvement of the community as a whole."

State Group Learns About Flint Schools

The guidance committee of the Michigan Curriculum Program, associated with the State Department of Public Instruction, is meeting here today to learn about Flint's community-school program.

The group had breakfast at Parkland School and then went to Flint Junior College to hear talks by Mott Program and Flint Public Schools staff members. The meeting was to conclude with a demonstration at Longway Planetarium at 4 o'clock.

Speaking to the visitors were George W. Eyster, special staff assistant for conferences and visitations; Dr. Mildred B. Smith, elementary-teacher counseling consultant, and Dr. Ben J. Owen, principal of Bryant Junior High School. Among subjects covered were the police-counseling and academic-achievement programs.

About 15 members of the committee came for the Flint meeting. Dr. Donald A. Davis, associate professor of education at Western Michigan University, is chairman.

Educators Arrive Day Early for School Study

A group of Michigan educators which comes to Flint once a month for a seminar on community education arrives a day earlier than usual this weekend to get a closer look at Flint schools.

The participants — who are working toward doctor-of-philosophy degrees in school administration — usually spend Friday night and Saturday listening to lectures and discussing community-education topics.

They met this afternoon at Southwestern High School and will observe activities at various schools tonight. Friday morning they will talk with teachers and observe classes. Frank J. Manley, director of the Mott Program, and Peter L. Clancy, assistant director, will talk to them at a luncheon Friday noon.

Speaking to the educators Friday night and Saturday morning at Bryant Junior High School will be Dr. Robert K. Burns, director of the Industrial Relations Center at the University of Chicago. He will discuss leadership and communications in educational administration.

Burns and Manley are authors of a book, "The Community School in Action," published last year by Education-Industry Service of Chicago.

Dear Frank:

Please accept this letter as an expression of appreciation for the very fine planning which has been done by you and members of your staff toward the cooperative seminar which has been conducted in Flint.

The meetings which have been held have been most rewarding to me and have served to stimulate my thinking over these past months. I find that each program has enabled me to work more effectively with my staff and Board of Education in broadening the horizons of thinking.

I am looking forward to the following meetings with even more anticipation than when I entered the program.

Sincerely yours,

Shirer to Present Free Public Lecture

William L. Shirer, author, journalist and radio commentator, will speak in Flint Feb. 20.

His appearance in a free, public lecture at 10 a.m. in Ballenger Field House will be under the auspices of the Ballenger Chair of Eminent Persons at Flint Junior College.

Shirer, author of the current best seller, "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich," will discuss "Russia and Germany: Keys to the Future."

His first book was the popular "Berlin Diary," published in 1941.

VISITING—A class of 52 graduate students from the College of Education at Michigan State University will observe community-school classses here tonight.

The students toured Bryant Junior High and Gundry Schools and the College and Cultural Center and conferred with consultants of the Flint Board of Education during the day.

They are accompanied by their instructor, Dr. Roy Edelfeldt, an associate professor at MSU.

"I was a member of Dr. Edelfelt's class who attended in the evening.

I heartily congratulate you and your fellow-workers. It looks as though you are on the way, to what a lot of us need in education (a school that meets the needs of all its people)."

Curriculum Group To Meet Here

State Unit to Study Economics Classes

Twelve members of the Michigan Curriculum Committee on Economics Education will meet in Flint tonight and Friday to learn about economics classes given in the Mott Adult Education Program and the Flint Public Schools.

Chairman of the committee, a unit of the State Department of Public Instruction, is James [illegible]orough, Lansing.

A group of 28 physical-education students from Michigan State University spent Wednesday here observing physical - education and health classes in the schools.

The students and their teacher, Dr. Thelma Bishop, toured elementary and junior-high buildings with three physical - education staff members, Harold D. Bacon, Mrs. Mary Peterson and Gene A. Desautels.

VISITORS — Six Saginaw persons were in Flint Wednesday to learn about experimental vocational-retraining projects of the Mott Program.

Among those in the delegation were three members of a committee appointed by the Saginaw City Council to examine possibilities of setting up a retraining program.

Visiting here Friday and Saturday, under a Ford Foundation grant, will be George Manolakes, of New York University. He will study effects of community-school programming on the design of school buildings.

Anderson Cites Creativity Need

Bigger Teacher Force Is Urged

By DUANE E. POOLE

Joseph A. Anderson suggested Friday night that more jobs in the field of education should be created to take up slack in the labor force "and increase the national wealth."

The general manager of AC Spark Plug Division told a group of nearly 300 educators at Bryant Junior High School that expanding the number of teachers — to reduce the ratio to students — would "increase the national wealth spiritually and mentally."

He said he disagrees with the idea of a shorter workweek which would have more people working fewer hours.

Anderson is the first local person to speak at the community-education seminar for school administrators working toward doctorates. Also in the audience were a number of superintendents and other guests, including staff members of the Flint Public Schools and Mott Program.

Anderson challenged the educators to sell his idea to the public.

"You have the greatest selling opportunity — the greatest product — in the world," he declared.

Creativity in industry was the topic of Anderson's talk.

Industry and schools should work together, he said. If schools ignore the factor of creativity, he pointed out, industry is faced with a difficult task.

It is important, he asserted, that the creative talent of each student be developed to the maximum "because it is God's intent and it makes for happier living."

He suggested a ratio of one teacher for every 15 students in elementary and secondary classes. If this can't be done all at once, he added, it should be accomplished first in the early grades.

The smaller class, he said, gives the teacher an opportunity to personalize training and provides an atmosphere for greater self expression by students.

Research and testing in creativity at AC, Anderson said, indicate "we can teach certain basic principles to help be more creative." He suggested that tests — or a good teacher — can detect talents during kindergarten or first grade.

Anderson said there are factors in present-day education which "stifle" creative thinking. He cited discipline of the school and social groups, possible ridicule of the individualist and inability to make studying fun.

Teaching by routine procedures and failure to understand the nonconforming child, he said, may produce a graduate with a dislike for study, antagonism toward supervision, lackadaisical initiative and a desire to live for the enjoyment of the amusement he can afford rather than enjoying achievement.

A high-school graduate, he said, should be enterprising and have a desire to continue study.

"Schools should fill his mind with theory," he added. "Industry can give the practical application."

An atmosphere for creativity is necessary for industry's survival, Anderson said. A company must be able to discover new wants and how to satisfy them, to develop new products in the event present ones become obsolete and to find new cost-saving methods.

Community Plan Interests Detroiters

Thirty-one members of a community-planning committee of the Detroit Public Schools Citizens Advisory Committee were in Flint Wednesday to observe community-school programs.

The group, of which Dr. Arthur G. Parkllan is coordinator, is working on development of a community-school approach to education in Detroit.

The visit included an explanation of the Flint program by Frank J. Manley, director of the Mott Program and assistant superintendent of the Flint Public Schools, and a tour of Southwestern High School.

Detroit plans to construct a high-school building incorporating community facilities.

In the committee were persons studying such areas as health and safety, recreaton, school-community relations, civic and political activities and auxiliary services.

Ending a two-day visit to the Flint schools today is the business-education committee of the Michigan Curriculum Program. Committee members are observing a number of business-education classes in addition to holding their monthly business meeting.

Coming Monday for a three-day stay are seven persons from Seven Oaks School Division, Winnipeg, Man. Among those observing the schools will be John Leamen, superintendent, and L. S. Alberts, chairman of the division's board of education.

COMMUNITY PLANNING FOR COMMUNITY SCHOOLS

ARTHUR G. PARKLLAN, Co-ordinator
EDITH V. EDWARDS, Associate Co-ordinator

"These individuals, to a man, came back to Detroit with a much clearer idea of what is possible in school-community relations. They now have a concrete idea of what one school district means by a community school. Through this week, these committees have been discussing various aspects of the Flint program and, I am very happy to say, in a constructive manner attempting to incorporate those features of the Flint program which we feel would fit into the Detroit framework of education most easily. .....

We are seriously making every effort to develop a real community school. Whether we succeed or fail will depend largely on how well these individuals can dream. You helped a lot!"

Recreation Plan For Seven Oaks

Operation of a "community" school plan to encourage wider use of school facilities in out-of-school hours will be instituted by the Seven Oaks School Division in September.

Representatives of home and school groups, churches and community centres in West Kildonan, Old Kildonan and West St. Paul were introduced to the plan at a meeting in Edmund Partridge Junior High school, Wednesday.

The community school plan was originated in Flint, Michigan and is based on the use of school facilities for every line of physical education, recreation, arts and crafts and adult education possible after school hours. Three board members, L. S. Alberts, chairman, Mrs. E. Farlinger, grounds committee chairman and Mrs. J. Margolese accompanied J. E. Leaman, superintendent, Glen Hansen, Business administrator, Ewart H. Morgan, junior - senior high school co-ordinator, Mrs. K. Kennedy, physical education director and Dr. Frank Kennedy, physical education director of the University of Manitoba on a three-day study of the scheme in Flint and brought back reports.

The school division has the approval of the minister of education, Hon. Stewart McLean, who expressed great interest in the plan and saw a possible link with the present plan for national physical fitness.

Three community school directors will be appointed for the pilot programs at West St. Paul, Centennial and Garden City Collegiate schools in September. They will visit Flint to gain first-hand knowledge of the community school philosophy.

Community organizations welcome to participate include home and school associations, community clubs, religious groups, service clubs, athletic clubs, cultural groups, Scouts, Cubs, Guides, Brownies and so on. Programs presently in operation will be integrated in the project where possible. Participants will be allowed to use any school in the division.

Mr. Hansen said costs for the pilot programs at the beginning would be small and future plans will depend on public reaction.

Arthur Wright, who represents Seven Oaks in the Manitoba legislature, viewed the plan with mixed feelings.

'PIONEER OF PROGRESS'—Charles Stewart Mott is cited as a "pioneer of progress" in an engraved plaque presented by Dean Ernest O. Melby (right) of Michigan State University at a community-education luncheon Saturday in Bryant Junior High School. Looking on is Frank J. Manley, director of the Mott Program. (Journal Photo)

Charles Stewart Mott was honored Saturday as a "pioneer of progress" at a luncheon closing the three-day opening session of a community-education clinic, in Bryant Junior High School.

Mr. Mott in turn paid tribute to Frank J. Manley, director of the Mott Program. An engraved plaque presented to Mr. Mott in behalf of the faculties of the state's seven universities said in part:

"The seven universities of the State of Michigan unite in tribute to Charles Stewart Mott, pioneer of human progress, creator of the Mott Foundation."

Mr. Mott was cited for "making Flint a laboratory for the world in community education."

Characteristically, in his reply, he singled out "this fine work of Frank Manley" in getting the seven universities interested and involved "in what we are trying to do here in Flint."

With activities going ahead because of the interest and cooperation of the universities, Mr. Mott said, community-education work is reaching a crest.

"This is a monumental step that has been achieved by Mr. Manley and his staff," he went on. "We are not here to talk about what we have done, but with the cooperation and interest of these fine representatives of the seven universities, we are opening up a new front in American education."

Mr. Mott was praised by Dean Ernest O. Melby, distinguished visiting lecturer at Michigan State University, who presented the plaque.

The people representing the universities "pay tribute to you today," he said, "most of all because you are the kind of man who has been willing to launch out deep and let down your net."

Melby went on to tell the nearly 200 educators at the clinic that it will be through such seminars that educators can accept the challenge to our American way of life.

"We need a sound, effective program through which to tackle our problems," he said. "We need in American education a part of the boldness that gave rise to America."

Melby pointed out there are four forces affecting "our pioneering spirit." They are:

- Urbanization and technical problems.
- A world revolution among people who have become aware of their misery and are determined to do something about it regardless whether they follow the hammer and sickle or the Stars and Stripes.
- The cold war.
- False-god chasing by our present society.

He said there is the need to develop and equip citizens not only with skills and economic means, but to develop every child as a usable person.

Mr. Mott also received a scroll from the more than 50 graduate students attending the clinic session. Jack Ryder, a Michigan State University student, presented the scroll.

The community-education clinic has two more sessions scheduled, one in May and one in June, before it winds up.

Middle East Position Is Mott Course Topic

An official of the United Arab Republic and a University of Michigan associate professor will speak this week in the Mott Program course, "The Middle East: Problems and Progress."

They are Dr. Abdel-Hady H. Makhlouf, first secretary, embassy of the United Arab Republic, Washington, D. C., and George F. Hourani, associate professor of Arabic studies at the U. of M.

The program will be at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Flint Public Library. The topic will be "The Strategic Position of the Middle East in World Affairs."

The talks will cover the Arab world's relations with the West, the Soviet Union, Red China and the neutral nations of Asia and Africa, and the Arab world's attitudes toward the United States.

Dr. Hourani will present an American's view of the Middle East's position in world affairs.

Dr. Makhlouf received his bachelor's degree at Cairo University and his doctor's degree at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Makhlouf, who also is cultural counselor for the U.A.R., was sent to the United States to study economics. He has held his present position since 1960.

Dr. Hourani, a native of Manchester, England, joined the U. of M. faculty in 1950. Previously, he served as lecturer in philosophy and classics at the Government Arab College, Jerusalem, and as a member of the Palestine Government Department of Education and British Colonial Education Service.

"I was a member of Dr. Fisher's class from Eastern Michigan University who visited you on Monday, May 7. ..... I knew nothing about the community school concept until we began our unit in School and Society class last week. I have done a great deal of reading this past week about the community school, but it wasn't until yesterday when I heard and saw the program in action that I actually understood what it was all about. I was very impressed with what I saw and heard about your system and think that what you are doing in Flint is a wonderful program. I never realized that so many people in one city could be so interested in education."

Researchers Report Leadership Is Big Factor in Industry Success

By ROBERT A. BATZ

"Workers go to their bosses with their successes, not their problems. They discuss their problems with their fellow workers and when they solve the problems they tell the boss."

This opinion was expressed Friday night by Dr. Rensis Likert at the sixth annual Community School Clinic at Southwestern High School.

Dr. Likert and Dr. Ronald Lippitt, both of the Institute of Social Research at the University of Michigan, discussed the topic, "Patterns of Leadership and Group Interaction."

Educators from seven Michigan colleges and 50 community school districts attended the meeting. The clinic began Thursday and ends today.

Dr. Likert discussed some of the results of a recent series of 80 studies by the institute in 25 industries.

"During the course of these studies," Dr. Likert explained, "we ran into situations where two industries, equal in every respect, were far apart in productivity. We discovered that the leadership principles of the businesses differed greatly."

Dr. Likert said management must have a contagious enthusiasm that can be relayed to the workers.

"Research in this area is exciting," he said, "because the most successful production managers in the country are evolving a new, powerful form of management that opposes the textbook concept of management."

Dr. Lippitt discussed further the relationships between management and employees.

"There are three basic relationship patterns," he said. "Either there is a positive attitude, a negative or a noncommunicative. These attitudes show up particularly in classrooms and on administrative staffs."

Dr. Lippitt explained that children establish definite relationship patterns as early as kindergarten. After only a few days they establish a hierarchy with a great deal of influence, Dr. Lippitt said.

"One of the most important things we learned from the research," he said, "was that democracy within a person does not always mean democracy of relationships between people."

Russian Educators Visiting Here

Five Russian educators are here today for an inspection of Flint Junior College and General Motors Institute.

Their trip to the United States, which including visits to educational institutions in a number of cities, is sponsored by the American Association of Junior Colleges and the State Department. It is part of an exchange program under which five American teachers visited Russia in 1961.

* * *

The Russians are interested primarily in specialized training, and the institute is one of three engineering schools in this country they asked to visit.

Boris Kuzmin, chief of the Soviet delegation, said his group wants to acquaint itself with the nature of education in "the best Junior Colleges and technical institutes" in this country.

He explained that the paramount interest is in the training of technical cadres for metallurgical, machine-building and electrical and radio industries.

Dr. Searle F. Charles, acting dean at Junior College, was host to the visitors on the tour there this morning. The afternoon is being spent at the institute, where Dean Charles L. Tutt Jr. is the host.

Other members of the Russian group are Michael Bayturin, George Zakharevich, Boris Gornovoy and Raissa Ryabova, a woman.

They are accompanied by Robert J. Martens, a foreign-affairs officer of the State Department, and Joseph P. Kozlowski, a professional assistant of the National Science Foundation.

"This visit to Flint was one of the highspots in my search for outstanding experiments in education at the elementary, secondary and adult education levels. You have done a marvelous job of presenting in a most dramatic form a unique idea in education. You have also gathered about you dedicated people who believe in the idea and are providing leadership necessary to make it work.

While I have never met Mr. Mott, the philanthropist whose money helps to make this possible, I agree with what I believe must be a policy that there is no better way to get this idea before the public than to provide one working model of it which is really successful.

Thank you very kindly for the privilege extended me to visit very briefly the Flint Community Schools and to participate in the Co-operative Inter-Institutional Seminar to which the Flint experiment makes an exceedingly great contribution. You have one more convert in Columbus, Ohio."

Four Inspect Community Schools Here

On the list of visitors to Flint's community schools this week are three Ohio men and one from Washington, D.C.

Arriving Wednesday were J. C. Wright, Washington, secretary of the Committee for the Advancement of School Administration, a unit of the American Association of School Administrators, and Dr. John A. Ramseyer, of Ohio State University, a special consultant for the committee.

Coming Thursday were Dr. Charles H. Stamm, director of the Department of Urban Development for the Division of Rehabilitation and Conservation for the City of Cincinnati, and Dr. Myles H. Knowles, assistant director.

The four will stay through Saturday to attend sessions of the Cooperative Inter-Institutional Seminar. That is a program in which seven state universities in Michigan send their leading candidates for doctorates in education here for a once-a-month seminar using the Flint community schools as a laboratory.

Leadership Workshop-Conference

MICHIGAN
Sault Ste. Marie, The Eve. News

School-Industry Sault Meeting Set

Educators in the eastern Upper Peninsula will gather with leaders of industry and business during a two-day conference in Sault Ste. Marie later this month.

Sponsoring the May 17 and 18 workshop conference, which will revolve around the topic, "New Dimensions of Leadership," will be the Tri-County Superintendents' Association, which includes Chippewa, Mackinac and Luce counties.

Invited to the conference will be all superintendents, school principals, department heads and members of boards of education, as well as leaders of industry and business.

The purpose of the meeting, according to Hugh H. Holloway, superintendent of schools in Sault Ste. Marie and president of the superintendents' association, is to continue an advanced study of leadership, communication and coaching and development of subordinates.

"We believe schools should provide community leadership. We believe schools should cooperate with other community leaders. We continue to practice the belief that what is good for the community is good for the schools, and what is good for the schools is good for the community'."

An impressive group of speakers has been lined up for the program, Holloway said.

Dr. Robert K. Burns, executive officer of the Industrial Relations Center at the University of Chicago, will be the key speaker. Accompanying him will be two colleagues to help in developing the program.

Also addressing the group will be Frank Manley, executive director of the Mott Foundation in Flint. He will use community schools as his topic.

Superintendents of schools in the tri-county area have been asked to invite their board of education members, key administrative staff members and any community persons who care to attend the leadership conference.

A special invitation has been extended to residents on the Canadian side of the St. Mary's River.

The conference will open with registration on the evening of Thursday, May 17, and it will continue through Friday. The program will be centered in the Sault High School's Ritchie Auditorium and the Garfield School gymnasium.

Thursday night's program will include addresses by Dr. Burns, on leadership, and by Manley, on planning, constructing and designing community school facilities. Discussion on school surveys also will be held.

Friday's program will include addresses and discussion on such topics as program of economic education for both high schools and elementary schools, communications, the community schools and coaching and developing subordinates.

Maddy Praises Resident-Artist Setup at NHS

Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, director of the National Music Camp at Interlochen, pointed to the arts as a "road to peace" Wednesday night and congratulated Flint as a unique example of how the road might be traveled.

The veteran musical educator and friend of a multitude of Flint musicians, past and present, who have attended the school, helped at the lift-off of Flint's artist-in-residence program at Northern High School. The audience in Cook Auditorium gave him a long, warm ovation.

Dr. Maddy said he was honored to be present on such an historical occasion. Artists in residence are not uncommon in colleges, he pointed out, but Flint is the first city with such a program at the community-school level.

Flint's example will so arouse and inspire the nation that every city one day will have musicians in residence, he asserted.

He said Flint in earlier years pioneered in the spread of "good vocal music" as well as in automobiles.

Dr. Maddy exhorted Flint to maintain its musical traditions as a "road to peace."

He said the United States spends $40 billion a year on "preparation for war" but only $4 million on the arts — yet "there are no enemies in the arts."

He said Dr. Howard Hanson, composer and conductor of the Symphony Orchestra of Rochester University's Eastman School of Music described for him the last night of the orchestra's recent visit to Russia.

After six encores, including eight repetitions of "The Stars and Stripes Forever," the players left the stage. Dr. Hanson returned to signal to the still-applauding audience that they had no more music to play, Dr. Maddy said, and the audience then began chanting: "We like Americans!"

While the pianist Van Cliburn was in Moscow after winning the Tchaikovsky Contest, crowds walked with him, strewing flowers in his path, Dr. Maddy said.

Dr. Maddy, who is a member of the music committee of the Michigan Cultural Commission, read to the audience a letter from Karl Haas, Detroit, chairman of the committee.

In it, Haas congratulated Flint, the Mott Foundation, the Board of Education, the Ballenger Trust and the Community Music Association for Flint's "unique" artist-in-residence program.

Raymond Gerkowski, executive of the association, outlined the project and the other musical programs of the Flint community schools.

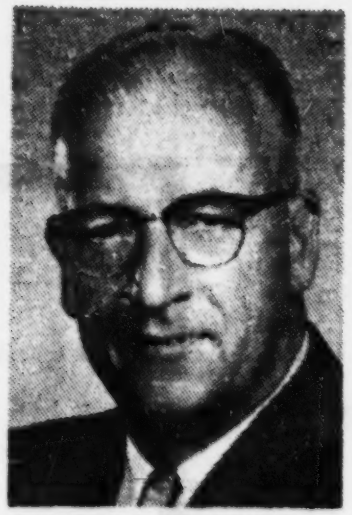
President of Ferris to Address Graduating Seniors Here June 6

The commencement speaker for combined graduation exercises June 6 of Flint's three public high schools will be Dr. Victor F. Spathelf, president of Ferris Institute since 1952.

The announcement was made by Dr. Spencer W. Myers, superintendent of Flint Public Schools.

About 1,500 students from Central, Northern and Southwestern High Schools will receive diplomas during exercises at 7:30 p.m. at Atwood Stadium. In case of rain the program will be at 8:30 p.m. in the IMA Auditorium.

Before accepting the post a Ferris, Dr. Spathelf was dean of student affairs at Wayne State University from 1945 to 1952. He previously was counselor of men and coordinator of war services at Wayne.



Dr. Victor F. Spathelf

Dr. Spathelf was superintendent of schools for Royal Oak Township and assistant superintendent at Highland Park before his work at Wayne.

He was given Wayne's distinguished alumnus award in 1952 and received an honorary doctor of laws degree from Central Michigan University in 1958. Dr. Spathelf received his bachelor of arts degree from Detroit City College and his masters degree from Wayne.

He has held top offices in the Michigan and National Congresses of Parents and Teachers, National Association of Student Personnel Administrators and National Association of Deans and Advisers of Men.

Dr. Spathelf has been a board member in community agencies connected with youth work, crippled children, veterans' affairs and hospital programs in Detroit and also participates in statewide social-service activities and in community affairs in Big Rapids.

Rafer Johnson, one of the greatest amateur athletes of the last decade, Saturday was announced as the principal speaker for the official opening of the 1962 Flint Olympian Games.

The 1960 Olympic Games decathlon champion and 1960 winner of the James E. Sullivan Award as the amateur athlete of the year will appear at Ballenger Field House on July 30, according to the announcement by General Chairman Nick Pappadakis.

"We are privileged to have Rafer Johnson agree to visit Flint because he is the epitome of everything good in athletics. His presence will enhance the official start of a week which has been planned for almost a year," Pappadakis said.

THE JULY 30 CEREMONY marks the official start of the sixth annual Flint Olympian Games which are expected to draw at least 5,000 contestants in 26 sports areas. Johnson's appearance continues the policy of having nationally-known personalities on the opening program. Last year Bud Wilkinson, noted Oklahoma football coach and physical fitness consultant to President John F. Kennedy, was the principal speaker.

Others who have appeared in Flint during the Olympian Games and the companion CANUSA Games—this year scheduled Aug. 10-11-12—include the Rev. Bob Richards, Olympic Games pole vaulting great, former standout miler Glenn Cunningham, famed hurler Harrison Dillard and members of the Detroit Tigers. Flint's Steve Boros was joined by Jake Wood and Dick McAuliffe as co-featured attractions in 1961.

"The community spirit which the median North American is another index, among many, of his lack of materialism. He is proud of living in his community; he tries to make it a better place to live in; to make it have something which will differentiate it from other towns. Those citizens who acquire a fortune, instead of spending it abroad, uses it first to provide something useful for the community that contributed to his rionness. ... We had the opportunity to observe one of those organizations, Mott Foundation in Flint, Michigan. The enormous effort for the betterment of the community which is being made through the Foundation is invaluable in human terms."

Latin Americans to Visit Flint

Nineteen Latin Americans will include Flint, its school system and the fifth annual CANUSA games as part of a six-week tour of the United States.

The Latin Americans, who will arrive here Saturday, will be guests of the Flint schools and the Mott Program.

* * *

The group is sponsored by U.S. and Latin American corporations, the U.S. Department of State and the U.S. Committee of the International Recreation Association.

During their visit here, the Latin Americans will stay in homes of Flint families as will the more than 700 athletes, officials and others from Hamilton, Ont., who will come here for the games.

The Latin Americans, who began their tour July 15 in San Francisco, saw the track meet last weekend between Russia and the United States at Stanford University.

They will spend a week in Webster County, Iowa, observing American farmlife; spend three days in Washington, D.C., sightseeing and conferring with state department and other government officials, and wind up their stay with a week in New York City.

* * *

The 18 men and one woman represent 10 Latin American countries.

Purpose of their tour is to further mutual understanding through observation of sports and recreation programs and other aspects of life in this country.

CANUSA Games Help Create Good Will Between Cities

MORE THAN 1,000 visitors from Hamilton, Ont., will be in Flint this week end for the fifth annual CANUSA Games. They will include some 600 athletes of all ages, officials, friends and relatives.

These games, started as an experiment in 1958 when Hamilton was invited to send a team to Flint, have blossomed into an annual event of international importance. They have become the highlight of the summer recreation program in each city.

Competition is spirited and the athletes of both cities place much importance on winning. But the real value of the CANUSA Games is not counted in the number of medals and trophies each team wins. It is measured in good will and understanding between youngsters and adults of two cities in different countries.

Each city has won two team-scoring honors, and each will point this week end to moving out in front in the overall standings. However, greater emphasis and effort each year goes into preparations by the host city to outdo the other in hospitality. Each year more thought and time seem to go into planning ways and means of making the visitors' stay an enjoyable one than in mapping strategy to beat them on the playing fields.

This is as it should be. Through such efforts is mutual understanding nurtured and the bonds of individual and community friendship strengthened.

We sincerely believe these games are fulfilling the purpose for which they were designed — to promote good will between cities of two countries. Both communties and individuals—spectators as well as competitors—have benefitted.

The Journal is proud to be a co-sponsor with the Mott Program of both the Flint Olympian and CANUSA Games.

$200,000 Community School Grant Offered

Foundation Backs Pilot Program

Expect School Board Acceptance Monday

By AL SELBY
Gazette Staff Writer

The Kalamazoo Foundation has offered a $200,000 grant to the Kalamazoo City Schools to undertake a pilot program in neighborhood-centered community schools.

The grant would be spread over a five-year period.

Acceptance is expected Monday night during a regular meeting of the Kalamazoo City Board of Education.

GENERALLY, the program would provide supplementary educational, recreational and cultural programs for youth and adults.

It would mean fuller utilization of existing school buildings and facilities by more members of the community.

Two schools -- Milwood Junior High School and Lincoln School — have been tentatively selected as sites for the pilot program.

The school administration already is searching for directors at each building. They are expected to be employed by the first of the year.

The school centers would be administered by the Kalamazoo City School Board.

Activities and programs would be fitted to the particular needs of each neighborhood, and be coordinated with activities and programs of other public and voluntary agencies.

The pilot program is of a type long under consideration here, and is similar to that evolved in Flint through the auspices of the Mott Foundation.

A statement of "beliefs basic to the community school proposal," as drawn up by the Kalamazoo schools administration at the request of the Kalamazoo Foundation, makes the following points:

- "A sound program of basic instruction in the elementary and secondary schools is the prime responsibility of the public schools . . . and other activities should be assumed only with the assurance that the basic program will not be weakened.
- "Involvement of citizens in the use of school facilities will result in greater understanding of the regular instructional program. This understanding will make it possible for the public schools to do their basic job more effectively
- "In a social setting which demands an increasingly higher level of skill from employes and which provides added time for leisure activities, the public schools can assume partial responsibility for providing opportunities for additional training and for leisure activities. We believe further that such opportunities will be used more widely if they are available in school neighborhoods.
- "During a time of need for added intellectual endeavor, the children of Kalamazoo have a right to the opportunity for educational, social and recreational activities which go beyond those provided during the regular school day, week or year
- "The public schools are in a unique position to work with existing agencies to provide a coordinated and balanced program.
- "The citizens of Kalamazoo, as owners of school facilities, should have the privilege of using these facilities for their activities after school hours and during school hours if facilities are available."

Preliminary plans call for programs to be introduced at the two schools "as rapidly as possible."

Center directors will be employed for a period of 48 weeks annually at a salary determined by the regular teachers salary schedule. They will be responsible to the building principal where the centers are housed.

The directors will be sent to Flint for three weeks to study the community school program there. A consultant from Flint may be employed on a part-time basis during the spring and summer, and on a fulltime basis from next Sept. 1 through Jan 1, 1964.

Schools Welcome Grant

Plan to Launch Special Program

By AL SELBY
Gazette Staff Writer

A $200,000 grant from th Kalamazoo Foundation was accepted Monday night "with appreciation" by the Kalamazoo City Board of Education.

The funds will be used to finance a five-year pilot course of supplementary educational recreational and cultural programs for youngsters and adults in at least two neighborhoods.

The school board authorized the administration to develop specific plans.

Milwood Junior High School and Lincoln School have been chosen as initial sites.

Combination teacher-directors for each school center are expected to be hired by the first of the year. They will take an active part in planning specific programs at each school.

KEY FEATURE of the plan is that it provides a chance for fuller use of school buildings by more members of the community, especially during non-school hours.

All six school board members present last night spoke in favor of the program. The vote to accept the grant was unanimous.

In remarks prefacing his recommendation that the board accept the grant, Supt. of Schools Richard N. Percy said, "There is no desire to usurp the responsibilities of other agencies in these areas."

Trustee Samuel V. Bennett seized on the remark:

"This point needs strong emphasis. One hears a little stirring in regard to this matter."

Bennett did not elaborate on where the "stirring" might be coming from, or how large was "little."

(The Kalamazoo Foundation announced it was preparing the grant in a Sunday story in The Gazette.

Board President Donald C. Smith said he thought the program offered "only increased possibilities of benefit to the entire community."

SMITH SAID the school board was a self-protecting feature in the matter of moving into areas served by other agencies. "Almost every member of this board serves on one or more social agency board, or is interested in their work."

Supt. Percy added that the board could be assured that "your administrator is, in himself, a self-protecting factor." There is enough school work for the Kalamazoo superintendent and his staff, said Percy that "we are not looking to other agencies for responsibilities and additional work."

Dr. Edwin Grossnic school board treasurer, s he considered the foundat offer "a marvelous dem stration of cooperation tween two major commu agencies — the Kalama Foundation and the pu schools — and a way to m Kalamazoo forward."

Dr. Grossinckle said agreed there should be " guards" to be certain schools "function as sch and not as social agencies.

Also speaking in favor of plan were Mrs. Edna Lo board vice president; Robe Cooper, board secretary; trustee Mrs. Louise Northa

COOPER NOTED tha Flint, where a similar prog has operated for years u support of the Mott Founda increased interest in sc has had a secondary effec much benefit to regular sc operations.

"The people of Flint have voted down a bond issue schools since the program s ed — they are more vitally cerned," Cooper said.

Official to Speak To Flint Educators

Ray MacLaughlin, Trenton president of the Michigan Education Association (MEA), will discuss "Ethics" at a dinner meeting at 6:30 tonight in the YMCA.

He will speak at the annual banquet of the Flint Education Association a unit of the MEA

Flint Sparks It

No Million-Dollar Boost, But School-Rec Plan Works

By DAVID S. BEHRENS
Of Our Broward Bureau

HOLLYWOOD — "The only difference between Hollywood and Flint, Mich., is that Flint has a man who donates a million dollars a year for its community - school recreation program."

ASHMORE

The comparison was made by Broward School Superintendent Dr Myron Ashmore, force behind Broward's new approach to public recreation.

Dr. Ashmore added that the Mott plan is now well underway throughout the county, although its progress has not yet reached the level achieved in Hollywood.

It was a trip to Flint -- to see that city's use of its schools for a full recreational and supplemental education program -- that spurred the development of the community-school relationship here.

In Flint, Charles Mott donates a million dollars a year to the program. In Broward, progress is slowed by lack of funds.

However, School Board-city cooperation is in evidence in Fort Lauderdale, Pompano, Plantation and other communities, as well as Hollywood.

★ ★ ★

HOLLYWOOD RECREATION officials give Dr. Ashmore a lion's share of the credit in implementing the Mott plan here.

"He's the man who has made it work," one supervisor said.

The superintendent broke the ice years ago when he opened the doors of South Broward High to after-school use by the public when he was principal of the school.

Although limited community-school programs were already in the works, it was the trip to Flint in 1961 that gave the local program its greatest impetus, according to Dr. Ashmore.

Under the community-school plan, the School Board now has many long-term agreements. They include, in part, agreements with:

THE COUNTY, which built recreational centers at the North Andrews Garden Elementary School, north of Fort Lauderdale, and the Driftwood Junior High in West Hollywood.

FORT LAUDERDALE, where pools and ball diamonds were built at the Croissant Park and Lauderdale Manors Elementary schools, and which shares the cost of the Sunrise Junior High pool.

POMPANO, where the School Board uses the city pool and where negotiations for a pool at Pompano High are under way.

PLANTATION where ballfields were built at Peters Elementary and Peters Junior High School.

DR. ASHMORE also cited cooperation between civic groups and the School Board to help finance and maintain such facilities as ballfields at Broward Estates and Westward Heights Elementary schools, constructed when the schools were in unincorporated areas.

The School Board has also established a policy to lend personnel to city recreation departments throughout the county for summer programs at school facilities.

"The School Board is on record in favor of use of all facilities to the maximum," said the superintendent.

"It is clear that we will be getting more for the same tax dollar."

Hollywood and Broward have no Charles S. Mott to donate a million dollars a year to full-scale implementation of the community school plan.

However, thanks to a trip to Michigan 20 months ago, the School doors will apparently be opened even wider to the public year-round in the years to come.

While the rest of Broward watched, Hollywood pioneered a comprehensive community-school program two years ago to put public schools into fulltime use. It's worked so well that similar programs have been implemented throughout the county—with more on the way. Here Herald Staff Writer David Behrens, in the last of a series, tells what's been done and what's to be done outside Hollywood.

Now, however, we are at a point where something may really happen. We have a committee on Boys Needs which has come up with one recommendation, namely, that the School Department and the Park Department get together and plan for the after-hours use of school buildings for recreation, etc. We are now planning a meeting of the committee with representatives of the School Board, Park Board, and City Council."

SCHOOL STARTS

This week signals the start of another academic year for the schools in the United States.

Many things come to mind with the start of this season. First, we hope that many of those young people who had considered ending their careers as students got a glimpse of the light and enrolled in school, that they decided education, with all its frustrations and work are worth the price, that they decided the roll of a "drop-out" was not for them . . . because the future holds little promise for those who do not get all the education possible.

Second . . . Mothers can once again settle into a pattern of accomplishment without the harassment of youngster under foot, the teacher has the problem for the bulk of the day now . . . can't you just hear a concerted sigh of relief from every nook and cranny?

Third . . . Here in our area, more than anywhere else in the world, it is a time of adult education too. We are the most fortunate of people here, we have opportunities for advancement, both cultural and material that are not matched anywhere . . . and we use them! There are more people in school in the Flint area after 5 o'clock than there are during the day . . . a wonderful commentary on the people of this area and a challenge to us all to improve both our economic and cultural well-being.

Fourth . . . but by no means least, is the fact that now that school has started we must all show greater caution on our highways . . . for there are countless thousands of students going to school. Crossing streets, riding school buses and generally being on the move to and from school. This brings to mind a change in school bus procedure which forces school buses to stop ON THE HIGHWAY, not the shoulder of the road, and demands special alertness from motorists. Cars must stop from BOTH DIRECTIONS when a school bus is loading or unloading . . . so be extra watchful, extra careful . . . we don't want any school bus accidents or rear-end collisions caused by school buses stopping ON THE HIGHWAY.

Your safety and the safety of your children depends upon the strict observance of these common-sense rules . . . Let's all follow them!

Jap Mission Will Study School Setup

Members of the Japan Youth Goodwill Mission to the United States and Canada will observe Flint's community-school program Wednesday and Thursday.

Eight women and 20 men, who represent areas of government, education, religion and social work in Japan, were selected for the two-month trip to the United States on the basis of a nation-wide competition.

They are here under the auspices of the U.S. State Department. They are being guided by Prof. Shinshiro Ebashi of the University of Tokyo, who is director of international relations of the Japan National Recreation Association.

The schedule for the Flint visit includes dinner at Southwestern High School; overnight stays in the homes of Flint residents; breakfast in a community school where they will hear of the community-school development and philosophy, and a tour of the College and Cultural Center.

They will leave Thursday for Detroit.

COMMITTEE TEAM IN FLINT WORKSHOP

An enquiring group representing M.A.S.A.'s Community School Committee participated in the Seventh Annual Community Education Workshop in Flint October 24, 25 and 26. Their presence, among principals, superintendents, members of Boards of Education, parents and civic leaders, added up to "something going on" in community education.

The Committee team took an active role in the three-day workshop. With teams representing 60 communities from throughout Michigan, they exchanged ideas about participation, financing and public involvement as well as specific educational programs.

The CSC members heard mothers, fathers, teenagers and educators tell what "their" community school means to them. The close relationship of families and neighborhood schools, how the Community School Director, Principal and staff involve students and others in educational achievement programs, the cooperation of the Flint Board of Education-Mott Program with local agencies, civic and community organizations — these were revealed during the firsthand observation.

Of special interest to the M.A.S.A. representatives was the experimental Personalized Curriculum Program launched by the Flint Board of Education to salvage the potential dropout. Working closely with curriculum consultants, "mentors" are striving to open educational opportunities to junior and senior students and youth who have already dropped out of school.

In a concluding address, MSU's Dr. Clyde Campbell said, "Involvement is essential in a democracy, and is part of the community school philosophy . . . Flint Community Schools can serve as a laboratory for the state, nation, and even the world."

Before a community school activities calendar, Mrs. Mary Peterson, (right), Flint Consultant, describes a community education activity to Wm. Eckstrom, (left) Superintendent, Lakewood Public Schools, Lake Odessa, and Chairman of Community School Committee, and Maxwell Hamilton, Superintendent, Fremont.

The Community School Program Is Needed Here

Next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday the Flint schools will be host to their annual Community School Workshop. It would be a good thing for our school, and the community, if a group of people from our school district would attend these study sessions.

Here they would get a broader concept of what the school could do for the community. They would have an opportunity to hear how such a programs has worked in other areas, some of them no larger than ours.

What is needed more than perhaps anything else in this community, to insure a good school program, is for more people to become interested in the school, and to become actively involved in the school program.

Many schools find that adult education classes serve the real purpose of giving more people an opportunity to become active in school affairs. They become more interested in their school, and its problems as they become more involved in its community program.

It is planned to have a delegation from here go to Flint for all three days of the program, some who cannot attend all of the sesions will go on separate days. Anyone who would like to become a part in a program to make this a better community, through a better utilization of our school, are welcome to go. If they will contact this newspaper, or the High School Office, they will be assured of transportation to the sessions they can attend.

Cost is nominal, only meals are charged for. There is much that can be gained, if enough people can become interested in a larger and more interesting school program which can be developed. This Community School Workshop is the best way I know of to get the information needed to get such a program going in this community.

Community Schools Called Fusing Force

Elainor L. Elliott

Community schools — with those in Flint being the best examples —were described here Thursday as fused units in a nation filled with fragments.

Dr. Howard Y. McClusky, a University of Michigan professor of educational psychology and a consultant in adult education, called community schools unifying centers of neighborhood activities in a society being pulled apart by many forces.

He spoke at Durant-Tuuri-Mott School to about 280 persons attending the seventh annual Community Education Workshop. The three days of meetings ended today.

Dr. McClusky stressed the need for a "sense of neighborhood" both in large cities and small towns.

The wide use of the automobile, especially among teen-agers, and the presence of many families who live in a suburban town but work in a larger one have brought this lack cohesiveness to the small town, he said.

The community school concept is a major attempt to reach a primary community which offers something for all ages, Dr. McClusky said.

He said he was not belittling the work of social groups, libraries or churches.

Another aspect of the community-school concept, he said is that it offers the greatest number of possibilities for the lessons taught in the classroom to be linked with the world in which a child lives.

An adult who may be studying the same subject as his child finds a common ground for conversation.

Especially important is the example the adult sets when he enters the school to learn.

Dr. McClusky said it is his guess that the reason for most dropouts in school is that they can find little connection with what is being taught and the world as they see it.

Flint is different because it has been deliberate in intervening in the atmosphere outside of school, he said.

Says Flint Schools Can Be World 'Lab'

By ELEANOR L. ELLIOTT

Flint community schools can serve as a laboratory for the state, nation and even the world, according to Dr. Clyde M. Campbell of the faculty of Michigan State University.

He spoke Friday to the nearly 300 visitors attending the final session of the Community Education Workshop held here Wednesday through Friday.

While serving as a laboratory, Dr. Campbell said, he hopes that Flint will provide a give-and-take atmosphere by taking suggestions as well as showing successes.

Involvement is essential in a democracy, he said, and it is part of the community-school philosophy. He said that adults in Flint have learned the satisfaction of serving others through their participation in Community-School activities.

* * *

Charles Stewart Mott also spoke at the luncheon at Northern High School.

He said the name Mott Program is really a misnomer and should be called the "Manley Program." He referred to Frank J. Manley, director of the Mott Program who had the idea of opening schools after regular class hours for the use of the community.

Manley responded that this "Manley Program" didn't go very far until he met Mr. Mott.

Manley said he hopes the community-school idea can be spread throughout Michigan by the seven state universities as well as by private colleges throughout Michigan.

When residents and school officials of a community ask for tips on how to begin a program, Manley said he hopes Flint can refer them to the college or university nearest them.

That institution perhaps could supply leaders to help train those within the area and thus widen the scope of the community-school influence, he said.

He said he would propose this at the second annual Inter-University Seminar being held here Friday and today. The seminar is sponsored by the seven state colleges and universities and the Mott Program.

'Amigos' Express Thanks for Visit

A note of "muito obrigado" — thank you very much—was sent to Flint today by the 25 Sao Paulo, Brazil, students who were here under the "Operation Amigo" program.

The letter, signed by the "amigos," was addressed to Walter E. Scott, regional manager of General Motors public relations, who served as chairman of the Flint Operation Amigo Committee.

"As we leave this wonderful country," the note reads, "we want to express our gratitude to all those who made possible our stay in Flint. We should like to thank the sponsors of 'Operation Amigo.' "

Sponsors include the Flint Board of Education, Flint Chamber of Commerce, The Flint Journal, the Industrial Mutual Association, Manufacturers Association of Flint, the Mott Program and the General Motors Plant City Committee.

Operation Amigo is a privately financed, nonprofit venture aimed at cultural exchange and better understanding between peoples of different nations.

The letter also says:

"We are sure this visit to Flint helped enormously in increasing the friendship between Brazil and the United States of America. We have learned much with your wonderful people. We appreciate very much our visits and tours, and to summarize, we can say, "Muito Obrigado.' "

Mott Foundation Heads to Explain Program Thursday

A team of four top officials from the Mott Foundation program of Flint will appear at White School Thursday, at 8 p.m. The meeting will take the form of a panel discussion.

Dr. R H Wilson, superintendent of the Alpena public schools, will introduce panel members: Dr. Ben Owen, chairman, and principal of one of Flint's junior high schools, Jerry Z the director of the Community School Program at Southwestern High School, Clarence Young, historian, and author of a book on Mr. Mott and the Mott Foundation program, and one other specialist in the field of vocational education to be named later.

Use School Buildings

The Mott program was initiated by Charles Stewart Mott in 1926, based on the belief that public school buildings should be used after the traditional afternoon closing hour. The working policy of the Foundation is to channel its efforts through a public tax-supported institution, such as the Board of Education.

Ever since members of the Alpena Board of Education visited Flint in October of 1959, and again in May 1960, there has been a great amount of interest in developing a similar program in Alpena In fact, a good start has been made here with many adult groups presently using Alpena schools for evening activities.

The public is invited to attend the meeting.

"I want to thank you, personally, and for the Alpena Board of Education for the marvelous hospitality we were shown in Flint. After reviewing the community school program firsthand, I now realize that it is not only marked by its educational and cultural values, but also by its hospitality. Our board and staff members were amazed at the enthusiasm which the people, staff and children in Flint had for the community school program. I can but hope that we can try to do something similar here in Alpena. To me the community school program is really grass roots democracy in action. It is an example of a community that realizes its most precious resource is its citizens and is willing to invest in them...."

Officials To Study Flint Plan

By F. V. W. JONES
Herald Staff Writer

A plan to turn Dade County's 181 schools into family recreation centers after school hours was advanced Saturday by Wesley W. Matthews, associate superintendent.

Based on the Flint, Mich., community school system, it would "establish each school as an 18-hour-a-day institution" and strike a firm blow against juvenile delinquency, Matthews said.

A meeting of school officials, county commissioners, and city recreation leaders has been set for Wednesday afternoon to discuss the proposal. They'll hear George W. Eyster of Flint tell how it's done in his town.

Matthews recently visited the Michigan city and found "schools that had more people in them at night than they did in the daytime," he said. After students are dismissed, the school, instead of being locked darkened and abandoned, becomes a community center.

Mothers take courses in sewing, singing, and the arts. Fathers go roller skating, play basketball, conduct Boy and Girl Scout meetings. Teenagers take over the gym for dances, the auditorium for movies and plays.

Eyster is a consultant for the Mott Foundation, founded by a wealthy automobile official, Charles W. Mott, who was mayor of Flint for three terms.

Although practically unkown here, the Mott plan for community schools is 25 years old. Somebody asked Mott to begin a boys' club back in 1935, when Flint was one of the worst hit cities during the big depression.

Mott teamed up with Frank J. Manley, physical education director for the city's school system. Manley arranged for five schools to stay open until 9 p.m., and the plan went on from there. It involves every school in the city today.

Some activities:

There are 35 adult square dancing clubs. Whole families join in roller skating nights. Some 14,000 teenagers meet once a week for general recreation. About 27,000 are enrolled in adult education classes.

In Flint, the school system supplies its buildings at no charge and other expenses are picked up by the Mott Foundation, which donates $1 million a year to the project.

Matthews thinks a similar amount could be raised here by diverting funds already budgeted for recreation by various agencies and units of local government. In the long run, everyone would save money.

"It doesn't make sense to close down the schools every night and then put up a new building for after-school recreation across the street," he said.

Louis J. Tasse

Community Concept

L. J. Tasse Gets Miami School Job

A Flint community-school director has been hired to start a community-school program in a Miami, Fla., junior high school as a pilot project for the Dade County Public Schools.

Louis J. Tasse, community-school director the last three years at Potter School and the preceding three years at Coolidge School, will start work in Miami Oct. 4.

Tasse is the first such Flint director employed to start a community-school program in another city.

Tasse's appointment was announced today by W. W. Matthews, associate superintendent of the Dade school system, which has 191 schools, and Frank J. Manley, director of the Mott Program.

The Dade Board of Education had asked the Flint Board of Education to provide an experienced director for the pilot project.

Tasse will work at the Ada Merritt Junior High in downtown Miami for at least a year.

He will teach afternoon classess, work on the activities program and cooperate with the Miami Community School Council to foster community-school development in other Dade County areas.

Matthews studied the Flint system here last October. Later, George W. Eyser, Mott Program staff assistant, met at Miami with school officials there and representatives of Miami agencies to describe in detail how Flint schools are used as centers for various activities.

In January, a Miami television station filmed Flint school activities and broadcast a program on it.

Tasse, who was interviewed by Miami officials, said they are hopeful a community-school undertaking will help solve some problems in Dade County. He said officials there expect the program to extend throughout their school system.

Tasse will be succeeded at Potter by Nicholas Manych, community-school director at Oak School the last three years.

Tasse, 30, lives at 917 Hubbard Ave. He is a native of Rocky River, Ohio, and holds a bachelor's degree from Heidelberg College in Tiffin, Ohio, and a master's in community education from Eastern Michigan University.

He was chairman of Flint's community-school directors in the 1959-60 school year and chairman of the CANUSA games in 1959.

Will Be Expanded in Miami If It Works

Try Flint Setup In Refugee Area

An experiment with a community-school program as it operates in Flint is being conducted by one of Dade County's public schools in Miami, Fla. A Flint Journal staff member visited Miami recently and inspected the pilot program being conducted there. This is the first of three articles developed from what he observed.

By DUANE E. POOLE

MIAMI — Is Flint's community-school approach to education an answer to a potentially explosive problem here?

The approach is being tried in a downtown school building in the heart of a Cuban refugee colony. Its potential for Dade County will be analyzed.

The site of the pilot program, which was started last fall, is Ada Merritt Junior High School — the oldest of the county's 44 junior highs and the one with the most pressing social problems.

Authorities feel that if the plan works at Ada Merritt, it may soon be used at others of the 200 school plants which serve nearly 180,000 students.

In charge of the experiment is Louis J. Tasse, former community-school director at Potter and Coolidge Schools in Flint.

The school he is assigned to was viewed by officials last summer as "potentially explosive" because of the heavy influx of refugees from Cuba.

The situation in the school and the community it serves was full of problems. Among them: A bulging student enrollment, a language barrier and differences in cultural backgrounds.

IT IS IN helping the Cuban people adjust to new surroundings, Rubenstein believes, that the community-school idea is valuable at Ada Merritt.

"The school can make them welcome," he asserted. "We have an opportunity to accomplish good will — in an effective and meaningful way — in the same manner as the Peace Corps."

Then the Cuban colony began to grow, resulting in renewed need for the school. How this need can be served best is a question which school officials hope will be answered by Flint's community-school approach.

Six Added in Dade County

Community Schools Expanding in Florida

Six more schools in Florida's Dade County are getting a taste this year of Flint's community-school approach to education.

Mott Program and Flint school officials learned from W. W. Matthews, associate superintendent of Dade County Schools, that the program has been expanded. It was tried as a pilot project last year at Ada B. Merritt Junior High School in Miami.

Louis J. Tasse, former community-school director here, is in charge of the pilot project. He will oversee the program at all the schools.

In each case, the governmental unit sponsoring the programs will provide $5,000 which is to include a share of a director's salary. The directors — appointed from faculties within the system — teach two classes daily in addition to supervising community activities.

The city of Miami is continuing the program at Ada B. Merritt and is starting another at a large high school. Metropolitan Dade County is sponsoring programs at a junior high school and an elementary school. Both Coral Gables and Miami Beach have a program operating in a junior high school, and North Miami has one in an elementary school.

★ ★ ★

Matthews said members of the Dade County Board of Education are pleased with results of the pilot project, carried on in an area heavily populated with Cuban refugees.

The board last spring authorized setting up of programs at various schools located in communities or areas where governmental units would provide $5,000 annually to meet costs.

"I suspect that Mr. Tasse has kept you advised as to the progress we are making in Dade County with the development of a community school program similar to the Flint program that I visited when I was in your City. Since, however, we are getting ready to start a new year, I thought it well that I make rather a casual report on our progress here in Dade County."

"Along in March or April, our Board of Public Instruction authorized the opening of schools in various communities throughout the County if the community would provide $5,000 to pay the additional salary of the Director. This meant that the community had no expense for janitorial services and lights, etc., and that the director would teach two classes in the afternoon and carry on the program through the afternoon and evening. We felt this was quite a forward looking step on the part of our Board, and because before the Ada Merritt experiment was carried on, they had refused to accept the $5,000 as a donation to carry on the program at the Ada Merritt school for one year."

"Mr. Tasse and I then started making the rounds of various municipalities and governmental agencies throughout the Dade County area to make this proposition known to them and to acquaint them with some of the outlines of the program as we saw it. I have not kept a log, but I presume we appeared before some ten or twelve municipal or County governmental groups. Almost uniformly there was interest, but in several of our municipalities, there was some conflict between this program and development of independent city recreational facilities. It is my feeling that we had our greatest difficulty in differentiating this program from a typical recreational program for teenage youngsters."

"We now have final approval of seven programs and are working towards getting these programs staffed so that they can be under way by the time school starts. Two of these programs that are sponsored by the City of Miami include Ada Merritt and one of our large downtown negro high schools. Two others are being sponsored by Metropolitan Dade County - one in a residential area in the north end of the County with a junior high school site as the center for the community school program; the other a residential area that is predominantly negro in its makeup in the southern part of the County, with the community school program centered around an elementary school. The City of Miami Beach has opened a junior high school for the community school program: The City of Coral Gables, another junior high school: The City of North Miami, an elementary school. There are still one or two others that are possibilities for some time during the year, but we are making no effort to promote further programs for next year. If we develop these programs in these seven centers and get personnel trained, it is our feeling that we will have accomplished our mission for the coming school year."

"We have been well pleased with the efforts of Mr. Tasse in developing these programs. He is certainly untiring in his efforts and has no conception of the word 'quit' in his tenacious drive to develop the community school. I am sure he is having some trouble adjusting himself to the peculiarities of the Dade County School system, but he is doing it admirably and makes friends wherever he goes. The members of our staff have learned to respect him, and I feel confident that he has the cooperation of our various agencies within the County."

DADE COUNTY, 1960-62

MEMORANDUM

TO: Dr. Joe Hall, Superintendent

FROM: Louis J. Tasse, Coordinator
Community School Program

SUBJECT: PROGRESS REPORT ON THE COMMUNITY SCHOOL PROGRAM

The purposes of this report are:

1. To provide additional general information on the Community School Program.
2. To provide specific information on the development of the Community School Program in the individual communities.
3. To provide statistical data on the individual centers and also the county-wide program.

At present there are nine Dade County Community Schools in operation. The ninth program began April 19, 1963 at the Norland Junior High School. The Metropolitan Dade County Government is co-sponsoring the program in this community. Mr. Emil Triana has been appointed as the Community School Director and the program is already off to a fine and enthusiastic beginning. Because the Norland program has only been in operation a few weeks, it was not possible to include extensive information on that program in this report.

The Community School Program has endeavoured to coordinate activities with the various other agencies and groups serving our school neighborhoods. It has been most gratifying to view the spirit of cooperative effort prevalent in our centers. More than thirty other county agencies have contributed to the numerous cooperative enterprises launched in our nine schools. One of the greatest strengths of the Community School Program has been its ability to encourage agencies, groups and individuals to work together in areas of mutual concern. The "see a need-try to meet it" approach has broughtincreasing unity and pride to each of the community school areas. Opportunities for several groups to compliment each others' activities have strengthened the programs of each group. The hundreds of youth, parents and senior citizens with whom our community programs are in daily contact have certainly become closer friends of education. It is difficult to describle the "feeling" of the program. The essence of any successes realized may probably be most accurately measured by the feeling of its participants toward it and their eagerness to identify with "their" community school. When this atmosphere can be experienced and nurtured in a school neighborhood the individual ceases to be an insignificant member of a community. His own human resources become important and he may function as a purposeful individual in his "home" community, a person more capable of accepting the responsibilities of the democratic processes.
